It wasn't so bad as we feared. Having a feeling memory of the statewide campaign of '87, we dreaded this one because we expected a repetition of the fire and brimstone that swept over Texas then. But Texans have learned much in the twenty-three years since then; they have become broader-minded and more charitable. While dogmatic assertion, denunciation and vituperation were the rule then, they are the exception now. But we are glad it is over.

A Texas man secured a license to marry an Arkansas woman, but as neither would consent to live in the state of the other the wedding was called off and the license returned. That was a lucky escape for the Texan. A woman who has no more sense than to prefer misery outside of Texas to happiness in Texas is unworthy of a Texas man.

This morning as the editor came down to the office he met an old darkey, who touched his hat and asked: "Boss, does you think they'll put it out?" The editor replied: "Come around Sunday morning and I'll tell you." This satisfied him, and should satisfy everybody who asks the same question.

The wiser of the British peers realize that hereditary special privilege has had its day. When we think of the absurdity of the pretensions on which hereditary distinctions of rank are based it is not surprising that they can not stand the light of civilization and the only wonder is that they have lasted so long.

Whichever way the election goes tomorrow, some will be elated by victory, while others will be depressed by defeat. This is unphilosophic. Whenever one has done his best for what he believes to be right he should be content, no matter what the result. Either elation or depression in such cases has its root in selfishness.

Col. Jake Walters sticks to his claim of 75,000 majority for the ants. Colonel Jake is like the Tennesseean who said the horse was sixteen feet high, and when asked about it explained that he had meant sixteen hands, but if he had said sixteen feet he would stick to it.

The endorsement of Woodrow Wilson's candidacy by both factions of the democratic party in Pennsylvania gives him a long lead over all other aspirants for the nomination. At the same time it is a death blow to Governor Harmon's ambition. The case of the reactionaries is hopeless.

If your wife is a good woman and smart enough to know why she is a pro or an anti, you will lose nothing by listening to and considering what she has to say before you vote. If she is— Well, do as you please about it.

Whenever you get a little money that you can spare, don't blow it in, but salt it down in a bank. Keep on doing this and before long you will have enough to invest in something that will bring you an income.

The theoretical capture of New York by the naval "Invaders" is probably another scheme to make the people believe that a bigger navy is needed. Oh, what schemes those fellows work to fool the people!

The pros are carrying on the campaign with blare of bands and flaunting banners, while the ants are gumshoeing and pussy-footing. In neither case has the result amounted to much in Brazos county.

The United States senate has fixed the maximum value of votes for congressmen or senators at ten cents for each voter, allowing nothing extra for newspaper announcement fees, drinks or cigars.

Senator La Follette spoke four days on the Lorimer case, and now he threatens to speak a week on reciprocity. If he should be elected president his messages would have to be published in serials.

The Houston Post sees in the effort to probe the charge of Colonel Ball that fraudulent poll tax receipts have been issued an attempt to intimidate and bulldoze the voters. This shows how crooked the Post's eyesight is.

Every argument against the initiative, referendum and recall, when boiled down, simply means that the people are not fit for self-government.

Col. Tom Ball thinks "the amendment will carry by sixty or sixty-five thousand." Too much figuring must have added his brain.

He who is willing to live and suffer for a good cause is braver, as well as wiser, than he who is only willing to die for it.

The question is Will the anti majority in South Texas be big enough to overcome the pro majority in North Texas?

The Elks have abolished all forms of hazing in their initiatory ritual. In other words, they have killed their goat.

Senator Bailey spent three hours yesterday threshing over old straw in a speech against the reciprocity bill.

It's all over but the shouting. But nobody knows yet who the snouters will be.

Laymen and Law.

The New Jersey Bar Association was warned not long ago by its president that laymen's criticisms of law were worthless because they "view the administration of law from a place too far removed for accurate observation." The president also described the English common law rule of judicial procedure—mostly abandoned long ago by herself—as "complete, wise and excellent" containing "not a single requirement that has not been the direct result of the experience of ages."

One citizen of Ohio murdered another. The fact of the murder and the fact that the prisoner committed it were proved conclusively. Unfortunately the prosecution neglected to prove what was the true name of the victim, who used an alias. So the supreme court discharged the murderer. An Alabama lawyer, in a speech to the state bar association, said: "I have examined about seventy-five murder cases that have found their way to the supreme court. More than half of these cases were reversed, and not a single one of them on any matter that went to the merits of the case—and very few of them on a matter that could have influenced the jury in reaching a verdict."

If a physician's record showed that more than half the children whom he treated for measles died under his ministrations, he might contend that mere lay criticisms were worthless because they "view the practice of medicine from a place too far removed for accurate observation." Nevertheless, most laymen, after accurately counting up the corpses, would form an opinion that there was something the matter with that doctor.—Saturday evening Post.

CONTRIBUTED BY COMMERCIAL SECRETARIES' ASSOCIATION.

The Texas Commercial Secretaries' and Business Men's Association is in receipt of a communication from J. C. Nicholson, of Newton, Kan., secretary of the Meridian road, a highway which is being built from Oklahoma to Nebraska, asking to get in touch with the officers and directors of the Red river to the gulf highway. In order that the question of connecting of connecting this road with the Texas transstate highway may be taken up at an early date. The promoters of the Oklahoma-Nebraska road are anxious to have the road extending from Canada to the gulf, and learning of the progress of the Texas project, desire to take up the matter of connecting the two at Red river.

Texas is fast taking its place among the cereal states of the Union.

Work on the thirteen-foot channel into Corpus Christi bay is progressing, and according to official advice will be finished by 1912. Another dredge will be put in operation within the next two weeks and other improvements looking to the development of Corpus Christi as a seaport are under way. With the completion of the Panama canal the Texas ports will play a most important part in the commerce of the world.

Our wheat crop ranks third in value of Texas agricultural products and has a farm value of $18,404,000. We produced 15 bushels per acre and the farm value was $14.70 per acre.

EUROPEAN NEWS AND VIEWS

London, July 21.—The series of visits made by King George and Queen Mary in connection with the coronation end today, and their majesties start the homeward journey from Edinburgh, nearly all of this week having been spent in Scotland. The king will arrive in time for the trying events of next week, when the crisis in the career of the house of lords comes. Next Monday opens one of the most critical weeks in the history of the British parliament. The lords' bill has passed its third reading, and it is believed that voting has been put off until next week to allow the king to reach London after the completion of the visits included in the coronation program. He has kept in close touch with the trend of affairs, however, but has given but little indication of the course he will take in the matter.

Many Londoners are leaving for Paris today and tomorrow to witness the Grand Prix de France, which is the automobile classic of the world. Only one American driver is entered in the great race, which is to be held over the Sarthe circuit. Another important departure from London tomorrow is a party of advertising men who are going to Boston to attend the international convention of advertising men, which opens early in August. These business men are enthusiastic over their trip and believe that the introduction of American methods into the advertising business of Great Britain will be a great stimulus to trade.

Next Wednesday a very important conference opens in London, namely, the First Universal Races Congress. It is doubtful if any gathering of an international nature has ever brought more distinguished men to London, for the speakers are prominent in all walks of life, whereas most international gatherings are limited to some particular sect, profession or trade. The object of this congress of the races is to bring about a better understanding between the different peoples of the world.

standing between the different peoples of the world.

Recently the Holy Congregation of Sacraments at Rome examined the case submitted by a French bishop who asked whether the priests of his diocese were authorized to refuse absolution to penitents who unnecessarily risked their lives through aviation. The congregation answered that although aviation did not in itself constitute a sin, still "anybody who without extreme necessity exposed his life to great danger just for lucre under took a voyage in the aerial regions without the necessary preparation committed a grave sin." In other words, the aerial voyage undertaken in such circumstances is compared to an attempt on a person's own life, and it is consequently condemned by the church, as it practically amounts to suicide. The church does not condemn aviation, which is regarded as a means of locomotion, and some time ago the pope granted the necessary authorization to the bishop of Versailles to bless an aeroplane, while recently the archbishop of Paris allowed a mass to be celebrated at Vincennes before down in order to enable the aviators who took part in the aerial race that was to be held soon after to accomplish their religious duties.

It is well for the peace of Europe that the Latin quarter of Paris has not the power of declaring war. Otherwise every long-haired student in the place would be marching on Strasbourg. A newspaper in that town has declared that of all French ideals which it is impossible to accept, the most impossible is the Bohemian ideal of the Latin quarter, and it advises all the student youth of Alsace to keep clear of that quarter's "stagnant morass of immorality." The students are up in arms over the affair and are seeking how they can be avenged for this unprovoked attack.

Richard Strauss, the great German composer, is engaged upon another important work, which is to be called "An Alpine Symphony" and will take about an hour to play. The first part represents the feelings of a lonely traveler ascending a high mountain, gradually withdrawing himself from the world. A lyrical motif runs through it, representing the littleness of terrestrial affairs. The second division of the work describes the descent, which is occupied with the struggle in the wanderer's soul between his feeling for nature alone and the higher feeling for the divine, both of these feelings being represented by their particular motifs. Finally the motif of religious faith dominates the other, and the symphony concludes with a lofty hymn of praise to God.

One of the prettiest skirts now worn in London has a sort of crossover effect with fringe ends. It has made its way to England from Paris, and its evolution is interesting. The general effect—the idea being supplied by the assistant of a great Paris dressmaker, by the way—is that of a butcher's apron. Said assistant was attracted by the neat manner in which her butcher arranged his apron when she was doing her Sunday morning marketing. First, she studied the hanging of it, then she considered the way in which he draped the apron. The result of the observation was the latest skirt, which is cut to drape the figure as a butcher's apron covers the butcher.

Election Returns.

In addition to the election returns from the state at large, The Eagle has arranged to receive at the earliest moment possible the returns from every voting box in Brazos county. These returns will be telephoned to The Eagle soon after the polls close, and at an early hour we expect to have the vote of the county complete. The public is cordially invited to be at The Eagle office on Saturday night and hear the returns read.

HANDICAPPED.

This is the Case with Many Bryan People.

Too many Bryan citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest, and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but can not reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills help sick kidneys.

The following statement should convince every Bryan reader of their efficiency.

Mrs. A. F. Thomas, of Navasota, Texas, says: "I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as they proved to be an excellent kidney remedy. I suffered for some time from a severe pain in my back. This caused me a great deal of misery and worry. I had heard so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box and in a short time after I began using them, every symptom of my trouble disappeared. I gave a public statement recommending this remedy over a year ago, and I am now glad to say that I have had no recurrence of my former trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.
